

ABSTRACT

A first data set is transmitted to a client device across a plurality of wireless communication networks, each network of the plurality transmitting a corresponding portion of the first data set. A second data set is received from the client device.